You need both time and place to know the coordinates of where you need to meet someone

So what if you didn't

I thought of a world where you could be in the same place with someone while still being in a different time like night or day

People who'd arrive at night instead of day would have an aura around them showing how they're lit at that period of time

So it would feel like to you everything is lit like a day if in your perception it's day time but someone with a night aura would see night because to them they're at night time

So if two people planned to go somewhere but not the time of when they'd go they could still meet each other

One would have a night aura while the other would have a day aura but they'd meet in the same place

One would talk to the other as if he's talking to the future since in the future there will be night time when he won't be there

And the other would talk to the other person as if they were left in the past because to him it was day time in the past

That also allows people to meet future and past versions of themselves but only if they're allowed to pass into the aura of the person they want to meet

So people can exist in different times but also can transport to the exact time another person is experiencing by entering the aura around them so that they'll see it as if it's day time so it would be like time traveling

rewrite